Music Isn't Seasonal, It's a Lifelong Experience

Keeping musical skills sharp requires practice throughout the calendar year. We provide some tips in our "Making Music For Life All Year Long" blog article. While many school-aged students might be taking lessons through White House of Music, a good number of our students are picking up an instrument for the first time later in life too! Many of our New Horizons Band members continue to play instruments well into their senior years!

Maintaining Your Instruments at Home

While White House of Music offers a great selection of repair services, some simple fixes and maintenance can be carried out at home. Our video repair tutorials guide you through the following processes:

- Restringing a guitar
- Maintaining a flute
- Tuning a string instrument
- Maintaining your clarinet
- Replacing a broken violin string
- Saxophone maintenance tips

If you don't feel comfortable carrying out those repairs on your own, our maintenance and repair program offers peace of mind at an extremely affordable price point.

Setting up a Dedicated Practice Space

The last step in making music at home is creating a great practice environment! Lori Hausen provides a great overview of what these practice spaces can look like in our "Designing a Dedicated Spot for Music Practice" article. If you need help setting up your practice space, give us a call and one of our team members will get you set up for success!
